Experience in teaching and innovative competence in teaching

In the past two decades, I have taught more than 75 courses on a wide variety of linguistic subjects. In addition, I taught courses on related fields, including courses on academic writing, culture and society of the Dutch speaking countries and literary translation. In the past years, I have supervised numerous student research papers, as well as more than 40 BA and MA theses. At Ghent University, I mainly supervise BA and MA theses on language attitudes, pragmatics and discourse analysis. Moreover, I currently supervise two PhD-projects and I am a member of one Doctoral Advisory Committee.

PROF. DR. ULRIKE VOGL

From 2001 onwards, I was involved in Digital Humanities projects with an educational purpose: I coordinated Neon (Nederlands online) at the FU Berlin, an information system on Dutch linguistics. At the University of Vienna, I created the project Dutch++, an interactive platform for variationist linguistics in education. Another focus of my teaching activities is to provide students with practical skills and hands-on experience. This includes various presentation techniques (Power Point, Prezi and Poster Presentations), the application of basic statistics skills (factor analysis, cluster analysis) and methods of corpus linguistics (selection of corpora, search strategies, creating random samples, presentation of results). Furthermore, I integrate innovative teaching strategies into my courses, for example a “world café” in my MA Seminars.

Specifically, since the COVID-19 outbreak in 2020, I gained ample expertise in virtual and hybrid teaching methods. I designed

- one hybrid course on BA-level (BA lecture + exercises, The Use of Language), with a virtual lecture part, and a hybrid exercise part. The virtual lecture part consists of
 - asynchronous elements, i.e., six knowledge clips
 - in combination with six synchronous Q&A lessons
 - a “leerpad” (learning journey) on the e-learning platform Ufora
 - and eight synchronous in-depth lessons on a specific topic, including interviews with international guest lecturers
- two hybrid courses on MA-level (MA seminar, The Modern Dutch Language System: pragmatics, interjections & The Modern Dutch Language Use: discourse analysis) consisting of
 - asynchronous elements, i.e., two knowledge clips
 - presentations of case studies by guest lecturers
 - a synchronous on campus hands-on session on methodology (corpus linguistics)
 - recorded student presentations with synchronous feedback and discussion sessions
 - on campus presentations of research results (poster presentation, panel discussions)
 - individual supervision of academic papers with video chat

Overall, I firmly believe in a strong interrelationship between research, teaching and services to an academic and general public. I am particularly dedicated to making students familiar with current research topics in linguistics and to raise their curiosity for linguistic and social phenomena. I strongly encourage students to rework course papers into journal articles: Delaby & Vogl (2021) on the interjections ça va and oké in Belgian Dutch, for example, builds on a course paper from my MA course “The Modern Dutch Language System: pragmatics, interjections” in the academic year of 2018/19.
